

How To Store Your Artisan Tea

Tea needs to be stored in an airtight container that does not allow any light in.
Tea does not like strong odors, moisture, heat or light.

How to Brew Your Artisan Tea

Use cold filtered or spring water whenever possible and be sure to preheat your tea pot and tea cups before brewing. You can do this by swirling hot water in them for 30 seconds or so. Water temperature is important for making the best pot of tea. General brewing guidelines like those below are a great starting point. You can further adjust the strength and flavor by increasing or reducing the amount of tea leaves per infusion. Ultimately, let your palate be your guide.

For brewing guidelines specific to each tea, please refer to the packaging label.

Follow these steps to brew the optimum pot...

White: Steep 3 – 4 minutes @ 175° – 185° ..... Bring water to a low rumble.

Green: Steep 3 – 4 minutes @ 180° – 185° ..... Bring water to a low rumble.

Oolong: Steep 3 – 4 minutes @ 190° – 200° ..... Rumbling tea kettle, just before boil.

Black: Steep 3 – 5 minutes @ 195° – 210° ..... Bring your water to a full rolling boil.

Herbal: Steep 4 – 5 minutes @ 210° ..... Bring your water to a full rolling boil.

Rooibos (Red): Steep 4 – 5 minutes @ 210° ..... Bring your water to a full rolling boil.

A Celebration of the World's Finest

Extraordinary whole leaf teas. Plucked from the tea bush at their peak.

White

White Teas are relatively rare. The tea leaf buds are picked the day before the shoots open, giving them a very subtle sweetness with a flowery, nutty aroma and smooth finish. White teas are full of antioxidants and are low in caffeine.

Steep: 3–4 minutes @ 175° – 185° F
Caffeine: Just a trace

Green

Green Teas are the least processed of all tea types, which gives them a fresh quality that tea lovers enjoy throughout the world. Their active enzymes and antioxidants make for a beverage rich in healthfulness. Of special note, green tea is host to a wide variety of cancer fighting antioxidants.

Steep: 3–4 minutes @ 180° – 185° F
Caffeine: Light

Oolong

Oolong Teas offer the best qualities of both black and green teas in terms of taste and health. Tea connoisseurs around the world know this classic variety for its distinctive flavors and fragrances. Oolong tea is known for reducing cholesterol and aids in weight loss.

Steep: 3–4 minutes @ 190° – 200° F
Caffeine: Light to Moderate

Black

Black Teas are full of flavor and are blended with a cavalcade of robust tastes including sweet, malty, light, crisp and can even be wine-like in character. Often complemented with a spot of cream, always rich in contributing to health and well-being.

Steep: 3–5 minutes @ 195° – 210° F
Caffeine: Moderate to Robust
